KETCHUM.

Arrest of the Great Forger.

A "Cincinnati Merchant" in a New York Boarding House.

His Father and Friends Aware of His Whorehouse.

His Movements and Subsequent Imprisonment.

Affecting Interview between Ketchum and his Father.

The Romance of Real Life.

From the New York Times, August 28th.

On Tuesday afternoon, August 16, in the year of our Lord, 1885, a thick-set, pleasant-looking man, with sandy hair and a tanned skin, walked briskly up Walnut street. The business of the day was over. His lack had been excellent, his pockets stuffed with greenbacks, and he was going to the city, Broadway and Wall. In the cellar he carried, quickly scanning the tempting array of leather and prunell, he selected a convenient-sized bag, stuffed into it his ill-gotten gains, and, with a note, whistled an air from the "Cincinnati Merchant," mounted the stairs, hailed a Twenty-third street omnibus, and was off to—where? The next day, Wednesday, the 17th, the whole

Elegant Present for Mrs. Gen. Grant.

Messrs. Brown &amp; Spaulding, jewelers, who have recently opened at No. 470 Broadway, above Prince street, have on exhibition a set of magnificent jewelry, which they have prepared for a present to the wife of Lieutenant General Grant.

The framework of the comb is of gold, beautifully chased, and wrought in imitation of two eel-like branches intertwined, and exhibiting distinctly the knots and roughness of the bark. Acorns, fourteen in number, and set in cups of gold exquisitely enamelled are depending from the two main stems; one of them attached by twigs and others suspended by chains. The least work, setting, etc., are inimitable.

The earrings have each a large acorn as a pendant, with two leaves and miniature acorns above.

The brooch is of the same general style, containing four acorns upon a leafy twig, wrought like the earrings and comb. On the back are the words inscribed: "Mrs. General Grant, from Brown &amp; Spaulding."

The jewels are enclosed in a fine purple velvet case, with white velvet lining, and satin. This bears the inscription in letters of gold: "Presented to Mrs. General U. S. Grant, by Brown &amp; Spaulding, 470 Broadway, N. Y."

Also, beneath are three words: "The wood used in this set was cut from the apple tree under which General Grant lay down after his heroic deed on the morning of the surrender, April 9th, 1865, Appomattox C. H., Va.—N. Y. Post."

Horrors in Pittsburgh.

Pittsburg, Pa., is just now supplied with local horrors quite up to the most glorious and follow them in, where no doubt, Mr. Ketchum was as much surprised at the unexpected visit as the officer and his companions were at the arrest, but it can do no harm to remark that in the case of all great criminals they are sure to rest on some broken reed, and to fall from it.

In the case of Ketchum, the reed was not parallel to truth. It was so in this instance. By this leaky, untrustworthy and false friend.

With the rumors, true or false, concerning Ketchum's previous connection with the French street family, public have nothing to do—unless evidence to the contrary is given, we are bound to take the statement Miss Ives, confirmed as it is by circumstantial evidence and the statement of Ketchum, to be correct.

AT THE POLICE HEADQUARTERS

Ketchum was confined in a small cell adjoining the Detective Bureau, and opening into the street. Here his cellmates were an instant for him. He talked coolly and unflinchingly, as usual, but he was not a prisoner, and he was not a prisoner.

When taken into custody, he was not a prisoner, and he was not a prisoner.

back of the Congress Park, where a great many of the poetic race have taken up their summer quarters, for the slightly poetic purpose of making money.

Their parents are still the same; ever marked with the grandeur of motive

which characterized them when Fens-

more Cooper used to hob-nob with the warrior-chiefs. I always think of the "Last of the Mohicans" and gaze at the man who sells wicker baskets with admiration and awe. He is so brown, so ugly, so mumble, and so very dirty. The

but of the red man is so full of poetry and other things. His heart is large, and his hand free; as is proved by the many articles which by a singular accident are always found in his possession after a fire.

The daughter of the pale face advances tremblingly, and for the purpose of making herself intelligible, cries out,

speaks as unintelligibly as possible.

"How mawing sweet basket!" and

the blue eyed girl of golden-haired

Shoddy meet the dark eyes of the noble

Awful.

Six dollars," he replies, he nearly breaks leaving with the admiration which her question has aroused. Shall we win her for his bride? No. The pride of the white man forbids such an alliance; but he will steal her breast-pin,

which amounts to about the same thing.

"This very day," murmurs the gentle Shoddy; "I will take any thing."

At this the chief pines forth a volley of oaths and stamps his dirty feet,

which course of conduct is quite justifiable under the circumstances. Already has the red-skin suffered too much at the hand of the tyrant pale-face. Any less indeed! He has been robbed of his home, of country, of all, and now meanly

attempt to jew him down on the price of his breast-pin.

But the sternest nature will relent.

Still gazing at the almost fabulous beauty

of Shoddy's false curls, a tear trickles

down his cheek, and he utters a broken

voice, he utters, "Five and a half."

Shoddy, who does not want it a bit,

and only asked the price of it, of course,

resolves to buy the whole basket. He whole soul is in a chaotic tumult as he brings away his. She extends a ten dollar bill, heaven! their hands meet. He Does his heart beat at the sweet contact?

No, it doesn't. If it did it would kill him. Any dealer than the door bell which, never having lived, is now dead

indeed! He presses the taper fingers

he gets the bill, and then he looks at them drop as if they were something very disagreeable. "Is this dirty for

does not the arrogant white skin forbid

all intercourse with the son of the pale face? But what of that? He has already cribbled her handkerchief, smelling of musk,

which he will keep as a sacred souvenir

—until he can sell it for a good price.

Stuffing the ten dollars under the folds

of his graceful drapery, a filthy blanket,

already begins to take the form of a

and becomes forgetful of the presence of her who had only ten minutes before stood so near.

"Where is my change?" asked Shoddy.

"Whatisthat," retorts the brave.

"Money," I gave you ten dollars.

"Poor Indian—fire-water—poor Indian," he looks up at her appealingly.

Both trains were badly smashed up, and the following persons injured: Loren Gould; A. W. Colman; Kellogg; Humphrey; baggage master; the fireman; and several others. Northfield has had rather more than its ordinary share of late "sensations" during the past week. First in order came the lectures of S. M. Hewitt, the temperance advocate. Then came the completion of the laying of the railroad track into our village, and the welcome arrival of the iron horse, shouting out and pulling his own cargo power, like a battle-axe to the sea. Your columns have already announced that regular trains commenced running between Mendota and this place to-day. It must be a satisfaction to your citizens that the aid of a steamer to Mendota you are now brought into so easy communication with our enterprising town. Allow me to congratulate you on the event.

Almost simultaneously with the opening of the railroad, we were greeted with the first "sound of the church-going bell" ever heard in our village. The Congregational Society, who have recently completed an enlargement of their church edifice, have, through the efforts of their pastor, Rev. E. S. Williams, obtained a bell of about 700 pounds weight, and resting some $400. Mr. W., who has been receiving the summer in the East, returns on his return to his pastoral life the hearty welcome of his people.

The Republican caucus on Thursday night was another exciting occasion in the series. Old Democrats of the Valhalla-McClellan pattern, because so much interested in the result that they came in and voted in considerable numbers on a "profession of faith" that they supported the administration. Such a political revival, numbering so many converts, would be a matter of great rejoicing, but for the report which has gone out that a portion of the number, immediately after the adjournment of the Republican caucus meeting, organized a Democratic caucus, and appointed from their own number delegates to the Democratic Convention at Fairbault. There must have been sharp practice upon one Convention or the other, in the game by which the same set of men decided the choice of delegates to both.

The grain harvest is mostly cut, but the stacking is far from completed. The yield is good, but the cutting has been unusually laborious, owing to the quantity of "lodged" grain.

valuable in their possession, and if they offered the slightest resistance they have been shot down like so many dogs. They were at length traced to this place, and the majority of them have been captured; but still it is unsafe to travel in any of the mountainous districts of California without the best of fire-arms, and a thorough knowledge of their use.

A drive of sixteen miles west from Spirit Lake, through the deepest dust we have ever seen, brings us to the foot of the mountain, and to the city of Placerville, which we noticed in a preceding chapter. The dust in some places was almost up to the hubs, shaking a foot in advance of the wheels, like so much jelly, and dropping off from the felloes like oil or quicksilver. If we proceeded at a faster rate than a slow walk, the current of air produced by the revolution of the wheels, lifted the dust in dense, rolling clouds, and enveloped the carriage with a cloud of almost total darkness. This dust is the result of the large number of immense freight wagons—or mountain schooners, as they are sometimes called,—constantly passing over the road; and in the wet season of the year it becomes a thick, tenacious mud, almost impossible to pass over or through.

With a desire to visit all of the leading towns in Northern California, we now start for Oroville, about one hundred miles directly north-west from Placerville. Making a direct drive of five miles we come first to EDWARD OR MED SPRINGS, a settlement of about 600 inhabitants. This is a town of but small importance, and subsists principally on its trade with travelers and teamsters. Ten miles farther brings us once more to the beautiful little village of Colusa, on the south fork of the American river, where James W. Marshall first discovered gold, Jan. 10th, 1848.

We reach Oroville, in Butte County, by a delightful drive up the Sacramento Valley, via Yuba Dam, and Marysville, just in time to witness the marriage of an "honest miner" to a little red-headed girl who had come all the way from Jersey to give him an opportunity to keep his promise.

The lady's red ringlets danced with delight; her low-dressed forehead beamed with pride, and her old eyes fairly sparkled with the fire of triumph, as she led her very embarrassed victim to the altar.

The man didn't seem to enter so heartily into the fun of the ceremony. He looked some as did Sam Weller, the Senior, when he said:

"Samwell, vetter it's worth while goin' through so much to get so little,—as the chancy boy said even he got to the end of the alphabet, is a matter of taste. I rather think it isn't."

When asked if he accepted the lady as his lawful wife, he looked at an imaginary nail-head in the further corner of the room and replied, "We a—y—e—s. I'm in for it. Go ahead."

The lady's reply to the same inquiry was,—

"Certainly—of course! That's what I come for."

After receiving the congratulations of the fully assembled band, the lady retired to her virtuous couch, and the man, to a saloon near by, to treat the crowd—where he remained until midnight, and was then put to bed in a separate room, by himself, so drunk that he had probably forgotten that he had ever been a citizen of New Jersey, or had ever enjoyed the acquaintance of a red-headed woman.

As we described this beautiful village in a former chapter,—we will now ask the reader to accompany us twenty-five miles north-west to CHICO, a level and pleasant little village of 1000 inhabitants, near the western line of Butte County (pronounced Chu).

The valley of the Upper Sacramento is generally considered to comprise the vicinity of Fremont, in Yuba County, fifteen miles above Sacramento City, where the Feather river empties into the Sacramento, and to continue north about 200 miles to the vicinity of Shasta. Like the Mississippi, the Sacramento river runs on a ridge and the valleys slope back imperceptibly for several miles.

Chico is six miles east of the Sacramento river, on Chico creek, a fine little stream taking its rise in the extreme north end of the county, and emptying into the Sacramento a few miles below this settlement.

There is but little mining in the Sacramento Valley, and the settlers in this section are mostly immigrant farmers from Missouri, Illinois and Indiana.

The soil of this valley is as uneven as the miles of an office-slicker on a election day. After driving through half a dozen farms reeking with the rank vegetation, we suddenly come upon a plain of a dozen miles or so, of volcanic rock and gravel, as chaotic as the valley of death, and the blackest of the barren.

A great proportion of the land in this section is held under Mexican grants. This has a tendency to discourage careful, intelligent immigrants from New England or Germany, as they consider hard cheap at no price that carries a law suit with it.

Continuing our course a few points west of north, up the eastern bank of the Sacramento, we cross the river 28 miles above Chico, and enter the quiet little village

The Democratic State Convention convened at Rogers' Hall yesterday.

Mr. Geo. E. Becker moved that a committee of three be appointed on credentials.

The President announced the following as that committee: Messrs. Castle of Washington, Johnston of Ramsey, and Merriam of Hennepin county.

Mr. Brishin moved the appointment of a committee on resolutions, to consist of one from each judicial district, and was carried, and the following committee appointed by the President:

The hour of meeting was subsequently fixed at half-past two.

Mr. Becker moved to adjourn to allow the members to hold a secret caucus.

The resolution was adopted, and all outsiders, including reporters, were ordered out of the hall by the President.

The doors were closed, and the members allowed to deliberate in silent session.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The caucus remained in session until within twenty minutes of four o'clock.

The caucus then adjourned to meet at the Court House at 4 o'clock.

At that hour the caucus re-assembled, and again went into secret session.

After another delay, reporters and outsiders were again admitted, the caucus disbanded, and the regular Convention once more resumed its labors.

THE IMMENSE ASSEMBLY.

The magnificent size of the mongrel, tetrastemonian affair can be inferred from the fact that the entire, immense body of delegates, assembled within the small bar of the Court House (which is 30x15) for the transaction of business.

There were also numerous outsiders within the bar, (we were enabled to count at one time twenty-five St. Paulers) and with all this addition the space was only about two thirds filled.

The former convention reached the prodigious number of thirty-eight but yesterday, the effects of Brishin's and the Pioneer's pathetic appeals were plainly visible by the overwhelming attendance of thirty-one.

In view of the heavy increase yesterday, we are led to respectfully inquire, "How are you, Brishin?"

It is to be presumed that the Republicans do their harvesting earlier in the season than the Democrats, as in the Union Convention on Wednesday, every organized county in the State was fully represented, while there were still delegates from unorganized counties knocking for admittance.

THE CREDENTIALS.

The President on again taking the chair, announced the first business in order to be hearing the report of the Committee on Credentials.

The chairman of that committee reported the following list of delegates:

Hennepin—J. M. Easton, Scott—R. G. Murphy, P. Hyderstadt, J. Lincoln.

MacLeod—E. F. Lewis, Douglas—B. S. Gregory, Stearns—Bennet Barker, Hamilton—W. G. Randolph, Rice—Chas. Shields, Geo. N. Baxter, Lincoln.

Washington—C. Lee Monteville, Goodhue—J. C. Pearce, Jackson—F. Meade, John D. Smith, Dodge—B. S. Gregory, H. D. Laid, N. Welch, Morrison—Col. Hays.

Shelburne—Wm. Tabbis, Mower—G. M. Cameron, G. P. Lewis, McLeod—G. K. Gilbert, Blue Earth—J. J. Porter, Fillmore—J. R. Jones (votes 3), Le Sueur—F. Bohrer, Cass Co. vote, St. Louis—Justin R. Bell.

The report was accepted and adopted. PLATFORM PROPOS.

The Chairman of the committee on resolutions offered the following resolutions as additional props to the old platform:

Resolved, That while we reiterate the principles enunciated by this Convention, on the 10th day of August, we recognize in the civil and military acts of President Johnson as they stand out before the world during the darkest period of the nation's trial, the fairest and the ablest statesman, the honest man, and that we pledge to his wife and patriotic measures for the restoration of the Union our cordial support.

Resolved, That we are in favor of an equal franchise for all citizens, and that we demand that they shall receive the same pay and bounty as the soldiers of 1861 and 1862, and that Congress should make an appropriation for this purpose at the next session.

The report of the committee was accepted and adopted.

SOMETHING OF A SCHEMISM.

Mr. Hoag, of Hennepin, moved to strike out of the platform so much as relates to the tariff question.

Mr. Becker moved to table that resolution.

The President voted the resolution out of order—saying the platform had been adopted and couldn't be amended.

Mr. Hoag—(exclaiming)—"Didn't you add two resolutions to that platform?"

and if you add new resolutions, can't you amend old ones? I object to having my resolutions thus disposed of."

The President stated that a reconsideration of the vote which adopted the platform was the only way the resolution could be brought before the convention.

Mr. Becker then moved such a reconsideration, and that his motion be laid on the table.

While this resolution was being carried to strange Mr. Hoag, this gentleman was making an excited speech in which he contended his only object in offering this resolution was to strengthen the Democratic party, which is needed very much.

The report was accepted and adopted. PLATFORM PROPOS.

The Chairman of the committee on resolutions offered the following resolutions as additional props to the old platform:

Resolved, That while we reiterate the principles enunciated by this Convention, on the 10th day of August, we recognize in the civil and military acts of President Johnson as they stand out before the world during the darkest period of the nation's trial, the fairest and the ablest statesman, the honest man, and that we pledge to his wife and patriotic measures for the restoration of the Union our cordial support.

Resolved, That we are in favor of an equal franchise for all citizens, and that we demand that they shall receive the same pay and bounty as the soldiers of 1861 and 1862, and that Congress should make an appropriation for this purpose at the next session.

The report of the committee was accepted and adopted.

SOMETHING OF A SCHEMISM.

Mr. Hoag, of Hennepin, moved to strike out of the platform so much as relates to the tariff question.

Mr. Becker moved to table that resolution.

The President voted the resolution out of order—saying the platform had been adopted and couldn't be amended.

Mr. Hoag—(exclaiming)—"Didn't you add two resolutions to that platform?"

and if you add new resolutions, can't you amend old ones? I object to having my resolutions thus disposed of."

The President stated that a reconsideration of the vote which adopted the platform was the only way the resolution could be brought before the convention.

Mr. Becker then moved such a reconsideration, and that his motion be laid on the table.

While this resolution was being carried to strange Mr. Hoag, this gentleman was making an excited speech in which he contended his only object in offering this resolution was to strengthen the Democratic party, which is needed very much.

A Scotch parson once preached a long sermon against drink drinking, a vice prevalent in his parish, from which, report said, he was not free himself.

When ye get up, indeed, ye may take a dram, and another yet before breakfast, and perhaps another after,
but drink always be drink drinking,
"If you are out in the moon, you may brace yourself up with another dram,
and perhaps take another before breakfast
and some, I fear, take one after, which is not very blameable, but drink always
be drinking."

"Nobly can scruple for one just be-dinner, and when the evening
brought in, and after it is taken away perhaps, and one, or it may be two, in the course of the afternoon, just to keep you cheerful, or to soothe, but drink always
be drinking."

"Afore tea, and after tea, and between tea and supper, is no more right and
good, but let me caution you, brethren,
not to be always drink drinking.
Just when you start for bed, and you're ready to go to sleep, to take a dram or two, is no more than a Christian may lawfully do."

"But, brethren, I must caution you
not to drink more than I've mentioned,
or may be you pass the bounds of moderation."

H. G. on Heidsieck.
The city editor of the New York Times
who was formerly connected with the Tribune, and who is now the proprietor of the New York Herald, has been asked relative to the significance of the term "drunk and sober."

"About fifteen years ago when the temperance cause was at its height in this State, our good friend of the Tribune, was the grand champion of total abstinence, not only in theory, but (to his honor be it said) in practice; and he made his intellectual ground so conspicuously virtuous in this regard, that ten of all his country readers were ready to swear that every man on the paper, from A. N. S. to Z. N. S., was a teetotaler, and that he himself was three times and a half every Sunday, besides Thursday night. One day in a conference with one of his favorite editors, the Governor betrayed his innocence of writing that on a specified occasion certain persons had been drinking, "brandy, whisky, champagne and Heidsieck."

The morning on which this Heidsieck column was written, I was informed, the writer was there) in a grand chuckle over the Old Man's blunder in saying "champagne and Heidsieck." Most of us had known Charles Heidsieck in the shape of a sick headache too often to forget him in a hurry. In our seven-by-nine editorial work, which held us in those days, we laughed heartily over the mistake. He was the future Assistant Secretary of War, when, in 1862, he was sent to Europe, and he came back with a green shade over his eyes, saying good-things, one-third sweet, and five-thirds bitter, there was the then Heidsieck, the fact-finder, but not the clear-headed editor. He was the man who had been a victim of the "Trojan horse" of
the "Heidsieck" brandy, and he was the gentlemanly Professor, and he was the
dignified, but not the clear-headed
editor. He was the man who had been
a victim of the "Trojan horse" of
the "Heidsieck" brandy, and he was the
gentlemanly Professor, and he was the
dignified, but not the clear-headed editor.

Consoling to comfort the Old Man, who had so often confounded us for lessers, we put forth the gourmand as our spokesman, and he, in his own right, said to us, "I have been drinking a little of the 'Heidsieck' brandy, and it has been a great help to me. I have been drinking a little of the 'Heidsieck' brandy, and it has been a great help to me. I have been drinking a little of the
